WHY VISIT

Beaches

Mauritius may be small but each of its coasts has its own personality. The west is the calmest, with little of Mauritius's famous wind. Venture south for hidden, rocky coves or east if windsurfing is your thing. All beaches are public so you can easily hop from one inviting stretch to the next. Blue Bay is a protected marine park with first-rate snorkelling; Trou aux Biches is picture-postcard perfect; Mont Choisy in the north is a long, curving bay backed with casuarina trees; while lively Flic-en-Flac, with its beachfront bars, is a great spot for sundowners. There isn't a bad beach on the island.

The Scenery

Mauritius hits all the marks as a tropical paradise with coral reefs (the world's third largest), white sand beaches, dramatic green mountain scenery, sugar plantations and extinct volcanoes. The south of the island is often acclaimed as the 'authentic' Mauritius as it is more rural and wild.

The Golf

There are eight 18-hole Championship golf courses and three 9-hole courses dotted around the island, all offering world-class courses to play on.

Swim with dolphins

Swimming with dolphins is an incredibly moving experience.

Playful dolphins can be found just off the West Coast of Mauritius.

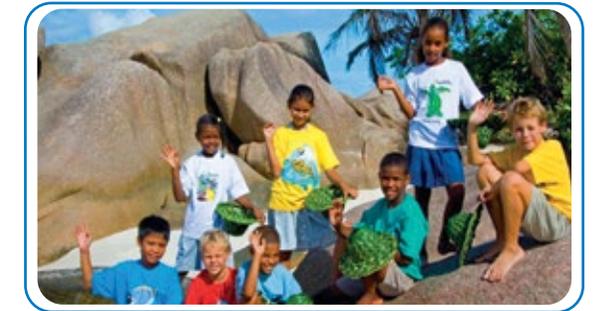

They can often be seen in the morning and in the late afternoon.

The Romance

For the third consecutive year Mauritius has been prized best honeymoon destination award at the World Travel Awards 2014.

Mauritius was voted the World's Leading Honeymoon Destination.

The people

Mauritius is a friendly, ethnic melting pot of diverse heritage. Indians, Tamils, Marathis, Muslims, Creole and Chinese live in harmony. Franco and Anglo-Mauritians reflecting Mauritius' former colonial ties with France, Britain, Holland and Portugal. English, French and Creole are the main languages. Mauritius sets high standards of tolerance and cultural plurality. Mauritius is an example to the world.

MAURITIUS

The Food

Mauritius's unique cultural mix finds its ultimate expression in the island's cuisine. Ask for a typical local dish and you will get curry, stir-fry, wild boar, barbecues or even a traditional afternoon tea. You can dine to Michelin-star standard at the resorts or nibble your way around street food stalls around the island; stop off at a roadside kiosk for tamarind-spiced pineapple and dhol-puris or have a lobster dinner cooked by a celebrity chef. Whatever you choose, you won't go hungry.

Cultures

The Sega is usually sung in Creole (mother tongue of Mauritians). The traditional instruments such as the "Ravanne", "Triangle", the "Maravanne" and the traditional guitar are used.

History

There are some fascinating chapters of Mauritius's past to explore.

Adventure

Bored of the sunlounger? Head inland to go ziplining, quad biking and hiking through the rainforest, or canyoning in the waterfalls. Or take to the water – every kind of ocean-based sport is available.

A Green Landscape

Cleared of non-native plants and animals, it was returned to its original wild state, where the Kestrel and Pink Pigeon flourish along with giant tortoises. Mauritius offer extensive tourist facilities and many places of interest.

The Shopping

Mauritius has multiple duty free outlets around the island and is acclaimed for its low prices. Photographic equipment, watches, cellular phones, paintings, antiques, sunglasses, leatherwear, jewels, and engravings are all duty free. Also, reduced taxes on perfumes and cosmetics.
